Aoife Scott is a talented folk singer-songwriter, renowned for her emotive and resonant vocals and her ability to blend traditional, folk, and contemporary musical influences.

Born into the legendary Black Family, Aoife is steadily rising to the top of the traditional and folk music scene and has long enjoyed success as an established artist in her own right. Fragile and ethereal one minute and strong and vibrant the next, her dynamic and profound vocals explore the emotional depths of her lyrics, leaving the audience entranced.

With a deep passion for storytelling, Aoife has continued to establish herself as a prominent figure in the Irish music scene. She has released several critically acclaimed albums, including "Carry the Day" and "Homebird," which have showcased her ability to fuse traditional and contemporary styles and earned her a loyal following both in Ireland and internationally.

Her album "Homebird," produced by 12-time Grammy Award winner, banjo and guitar virtuoso Ron Block (Alison Krauss & Union Station, and 'Oh Brother Where art thou), is in many ways a turning point in her musical legacy. Recorded in Nashville and Dublin, it is an impressive collaboration featuring the best of Irish folk musicians and Grammy award-winning Bluegrass musicians Sierra Hull, Stuart Duncan, and producer Ron Block.

It's only a few short years since Aoife's single "All Along the Wild Atlantic Way" hit the number 1 slot, knocking Ed Sheeran off the top spot, and was named "Song of the Year" at the Irish Folk Music Awards. Her career successes have seen Aoife and her cousins, Róisín O & Danny O Reilly from The Coronas, release their single "Grace," which also hit straight into the number 1 slot on iTunes in Ireland. This performance has gained over 2 million streams on YouTube and Spotify, with their performance from Kilmainham Gaol as part of Centenary on RTE1.

In addition to her music career, Aoife is also an accomplished radio broadcaster. She has hosted the popular folk music program "Folk on One" on RTÉ Radio 1, where she shares her extensive knowledge and passion for Folk and traditional music with listeners around the world.

In 2022, alongside her touring partner Andy Meaney, she toured and performed an impressive 100 concerts across eight different countries, showcasing her versatility and captivating audiences with her soulful performances.
